My Life, My Love, My Legacy by Coretta Scott King

A touching memoir from an important figure in the civil rights movement transcribed by journalist Dr. Barbara Reynolds. Overall, the tone is as gracious and soft-spoken as the legendary Southern lady and concert singer herself, born in a deeply segregated town in Alabama. Coretta lived a life of violence and hatred directed at her and her family, and yet she rose above it with strength and an ability to persevere and love. While her biography is very much her own journey, it also includes details of historical events relating to her husband, their family, and the legacy that she carried on after MLK Jr.'s death. A love story, a family saga, and the memoir of an extraordinary brave leader.

Simple Natural Healing by Donna LaBar

Author Donna La Bar firmly believes in nutritional healing to reverse nearly every ill. She spent 30 years studying the science of how the body naturally heals itself and translates scientific healing health approaches into layman's terms. Everything La Bar knew about recovering the body to wellness was put to the test when her daughter, age twelve, was diagnosed with advanced leukemia. Her recovery changed LaBar's life and the lives of everyone she has helped. She continues to coach others with terminal diagnoses and illnesses and includes stories of their recoveries. She navigates the science and explains in easy steps how to leverage the body's ability to heal and repair itself.

The Most Dangerous Place on Earth by Lindsey Lee Johnson

Set in a wealthy town near San Francisco, the story focuses on a group of teenagers and one of their younger teachers. They are entitled, spoiled, and largely ignored by their parents. Johnson uses this setting as a springboard to explore the culture of privileged teens today. She takes turns telling the student's and teacher's stories in 3rd person vignettes meant to give us glimpses inside their minds. Each vignette tells part of one larger story, of which they are all a part of. The book warns of the horrors of social media, how it betrays friendships, how people can be heartless and ruthless with no regard to feelings and outcomes.

An Irish Country Love Story by Patrick Taylor

The eleventh heartwarming installment in bestselling author Patrick Taylor's beloved Irish Country series. This is a love story on several levels. The love between couples is seen through Dr. Fingal and Kitty, Barry and Sue, and the rest of the eccentric characters that Taylor brings to life. The affection the village townspeople have for each other is demonstrated in their community search for Sonny's missing dog and the efforts to save the doctor's beloved home, which may have to be torn down. Always a bit of controversy to spoil what is often a picture-perfect life in Ireland but it's the love of the community that shines through in the end.
